

Tailored Education and Training Workshops Manual Task Training

At Altius Group we design Tailored Education and Training Workshops to keep people fit and healthy at work and in life while reducing the frequency and cost of workplace injury. Industry evidence highlights the importance of education as the key to injury prevention and the basis of a safer, healthier and more productive workforce.

We understand that over a third of all workplace injuries are associated with manual handling and that adequate education and training significantly reduces the risk of injury. According to Safe Work Australia 43,553 claims were lodged for body stressing across a recent five year period.

Experienced Educators

Altius Group's team of allied health professionals, located across Australia, are able to deliver Manual Task Training workshops nationally. Our experienced educators guide employees through best practice for manual tasks including lifting, carrying, pushing, pulling, moving or holding a load, object or person.

As work varies greatly, our allied health professionals take time to assess the physical demands unique to each role and each workplace. Training is then tailored to cover the impact of duties relevant to each work situation, with particular attention paid to specific impacts on employee musculoskeletal functioning.

Our Manual Task Training Workshops aim to empower employees to take responsibility for their own safety and physical well-being, covering:

- Basic anatomy instruction including an awareness of the spine, its strongest and weakest positions, and the functions of discs when applying load.
- The importance of risk assessments in relation to lifting, handling, carrying and unloading processes.
- Safe methods of lifting, pushing, pulling and carrying - focusing on correct postures, positioning and breathing.
- Risk factors for workplace specific issues such as Carpel Tunnel Syndrome, Occupational Overuse Syndrome and shoulder injuries.
- The importance of stretching, strengthening, sleep and diet to injury prevention.
- A discussion of manual task practices specific to your work environment.
